If you wish to restrict access to your sensitive data, the app will be able to track the activities of a given PC user. This will include things like which files are accessed and when, as well as the time at which such interaction takes place. A file-based operation is extremely useful, as you can easily keep a watchful eye on the activities of users, or even your children, when they are attempting to access sensitive data on your computer. Some of the features that come bundled with this app include password monitoring, data access tracking, and even file locking. With the latter feature, you can restrict access to your files, even if they are being accessed by someone other than you. As a result, the unwanted user will only be able to access a given file, if the file itself is unlocked. The app can be configured to monitor

Its graphic user interface is quite pleasing and easy to navigate, even more so when considering the fact that you can easily define your own macros. KeyMACRO comes with quite a few keystrokes that can be applied to different fields, values, or even other macros, depending on the user's preferences. KeyMACRO comes with a number of features that are aimed at keeping users up-to-date, or adding to the quality and functionality of its keystrokes, such as the ability to automatically select all fields that are associated with macros, and even the regular ones. The app also features a number of conversion options, and even more importantly, has several handy functions that are aimed at limiting the use of certain keystrokes. One of the most useful features is the ability to convert numbers to characters, or characters to numbers, in just a few simple steps. Keeping up with the changes in time, KeyMACRO can also automatically update the app itself, and even keep you up-to-date on the changes that are made to the core of the application. As far as speed is concerned, the app does an excellent job at performing its functions, thanks to its optimized code that is built from the ground up. As for a problem with speed, the app does have a minor, but rather inconvenient issue, which is related to the fact that the method used to retrieve user input doesn't work in a timely manner.
