What's new:

OF THE YOUNGER GENERATION Lately people have been losing their jobs when they reach middle age like me, and realizing that they either have to up sticks and find a new job or they become destitute. First off, the idea that the current economy is going through such a steep decline is a gross overstatement, but the jobs are there for the taking, just need to know what to look for. When I was in the Army, I once took a job like that, driving a mail truck a thirty mile stretch of highway everyday and working eight hours a day. The pay rate was reasonable because they paid the per mile rate which was much higher than the per hour rate for working the mile. *EJG* Here's a video clip of a guy who left his job to find a "wage slave" job to help his family pay their bills. Sound familiar?? That's the problem with the current generation of workers in the media, education, government, and every other profession. An enormous number of us out of the workforce because it doesn't suit our fancy. It's not enough just to have work, we want to make it into something else. I always preached the old adage "You are what you are doing in the moment", that's the key to keeping a successful team because you can't look into the future. The guy who's sitting there blowing up at you did a couple of good things while he was doing it, but once you've got him the fuck over you move on with your life. Always lead with the belief that a relationship will end if a player doesn't deliver, look for players who understand that principle, not players who will form a line of trust for three seasons, follow them as far as they will let you! Once you've identified the individual who is going to bring you success you need to stop playing into their hands, it's like a kid calling the police when he can't handle the situation. Stop playing the game, look for another one! Look for players who will lead, look for players who will commit to you as long as you commit to them, players that will never look for a better offer. This means no sex-games, no rehab bullshit! It means value, honor, respect, focus and work ethic. Players with these
